Sloan Foundation Elects New President

Earlier this month, the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation’s board of trustees announced the election of Paul L. Joskow as president of the Foundation effective January 1, 2008. He is a professor of economics and management at MIT and director of the MIT Center for Energy and Environmental Policy Research.

Paul Joskow received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Cornell University in 1968 and a doctorate in economics from Yale University in 1972. He has been on the MIT faculty since 1972 and served as head of its department of economics from 1994 to 1998. At MIT he has been engaged in teaching and research in the areas of industrial organization, energy and environmental economics, competition policy, and government regulation of industry. Professor Joskow has published six books and more than 120 articles and papers in these areas. He has been an advisor to many government agencies, non-profit organizations and for-profit companies and has served on the boards of directors of several U.S. and international corporations.

Joskow will succeed Ralph E. Gomory, who has been president since 1989 and will remain with the Foundation as director of special programs.

Established in 1934 by Alfred Pritchard Sloan, Jr., then-President and Chief Executive Officer of the General Motors Corporation, the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation makes grants in science, technology and the quality of American life. The Sloan Foundation provides generous financial support to CPBIS.
